SHADOW AND LIGHT AFFECTS COLOR

Color — and the perception of color — is greatly affected by multiple factors. These photos of Sand-Stone-Mocha Courtyard Stone were all taken on the same day at the same property. When photographed before sunset and shortly after sunset, you can see how the light of day changes the color. It is this change in light, throughout the day, that creates beautiful variations of color. Consequently, photographic conditions, the time of day, the weather, the paver's texture and manufacturing conditions — even the quality of the printed page or website image — can all affect the perception of paver colors. And, because these conditions are variable, Angelus always recommends viewing physical samples prior to installation. Angelus Pavers & Walls. Beautiful in any light.
